

Here is his short CV:

András Szász is the developer of the method oncothermia and founder of Oncotherm Kft. (1988), as a spin-off from Eotvos Science University, Budapest. Presently, he is the chief scientific officer of the company. He is an active educator; presently teaches Biophysics and Bioelectromagnetics Fractal Physiology at different Universities. He is head of the Department of Biotechnics. His research activity covers bioelectromagnetics and fractal physiology. He is member of numerous professional Societies. The number of his publications is over 400 including books, patents and professional articles and has further 300 various conference abstracts and popular publications.